

ABSTRACT

Methods and apparatus, including computer program products implement techniques for validating programs. A language-independent description of a computer program is received, and the language-independent description is validated. The language-independent
5 description includes a definition module and an implementation module. A language-dependent program is generated from the language-independent description, where the language-dependent program includes an interface and a class, and the language-dependent program is validated.

50113175.7.doc